GOOD AFTERNOON!

Driving conditions could not be much worse than they have been the past forty-eight hours. Sleet, rain and snow have had to be contended with, and the roads have been treacherously slippery.

THOUGHTS FOR TODAY

Let your light so shine before men, that they may see your good works. —St. Matthew, iv: 16.

The man with the most decided opinions has usually had the least experience.

People worry now because the government has piled up so much debt, and they worried twenty years ago because the country had no debt (or virtually none).

STORMY WEATHER

"Roasting," cries the turkey; "Chill!" says the sauce; "Freezing!" moans the ice-cream; "Mild!" calls the cheese; "Frosting!" declares the cake; "Clear!" vows the jelly; "Pouring!" gurgles the coffee. —The Faithfinder.

Is a New School Needed?

The question before the Board of Education and the taxpayers of Peekskill regarding the construction of a new school building should not be confused.

Is a new building needed? That is the question. It has been stated that the district can probably get along, even though crowded conditions may exist in certain schools, for another five years.

At the end of that period, an additional school building will have to be constructed.

What do the people of Peekskill desire to do? Wait until 1938, and take their chances on increased costs, or take advantage of an outright gift from the Federal government, estimated to be $60,000?

That amount would represent one-third of the cost of a 12-room building. The taxpayers would have to stand only two-thirds of the expense if the project is approved now.

As to where the building should be erected, while important, that is secondary. The thing to be decided now is, shall a building be erected at this time?

The Board of Education has arranged to submit this proposition to the people within a few weeks. The matter should be given very careful thought.

There should be no half-cocked decision. There is much to be said on both sides of the question.

The matter of the most suitable site can be taken up in due time.

Letters to the Editor

Dear Sir: Saw in a recent issue of your paper where a little girl asked food for her to feed the birds.

Almost every one has a flock of birds hanging around their door waiting to be fed. I never throw anything away that bird or animal can eat; the tramp cats and dogs have to be fed, they are not to blame for being here. If I have scraps of meat or bones, I always put them out on a pan, and in the morning I find "they" have licked the platter clean," like Jack Spratt and his wife.

God gave us our little feathered friends that we might enjoy their song. He cannot come down to feed them. We are his agents. J.

A RUMOR VERIFIED

It has been rumored abroad that I am writing a book. I will not deny it. In fact, I started the rumor myself. I could write the book and start the rumor without any help. But I could not do the printing and binding. If I could, the book would have been out some time ago.

You see, I was delayed by the publishers. Only the latter part of last week did they send me the advance copy for approval. And I did not approve. There was an error in the cover which had to be corrected. So the publishers and myself have kept the wires hot.

Now the difficulties are ended. The books will be here almost any day. I expect to send several myself for Christmas gifts. It is too bad they have not arrived sooner, but they will still be here in time unless they must be sent some distance by mail.

And even if you do not get a copy for Christmas, the books will keep. They will be quite as good for Easter or for birthday gifts or for next Christmas. What I have written in this book will read as well 100 years from now as today. It contains eternal truths.

It is beautifully printed and bound. It contains three dozen (36) selected wee essays. Many of them feed the birds every day, and in the early morning. They sit on a branch waiting for me, and look for all the world like a bunch of pussy willows on a stick. They know I won't hurt them, and fly down around me, and feel that I am their friend.

Hope every one who reads this will sit up and take notice as to their obligation to these poor little hungry creatures, who help themselves when possible, but with snow on the ground food is hard to get. (Signed) MRS. A. M. GREENE, 209 Walnut Street.

4,000 at Lighting Company Employees' Dance at Center—Approximately 4,000 persons attended an entertainment and dance held last night in the Westchester County Center, White Plains, by the Employees' Mutual Aid Societies of Westchester Lighting Company and the Yonkers Electric Light and Power Company. During the event employees of the utility organization were inducted into the Quarter Century Club of their respective company. Harry D. Swain, manager of the Peekskill office; Mrs. Swain and a large number of employees from the various departments of the local office were in attendance.

After a high-class vaudeville program was presented, Eugene H. Rosenquest, of Bronxville, president of both companies, welcomed the assemblage. Mr. Rosenquest said he believed the gathering was "an augury of future prosperity and happiness for us all. At least, let us hope so and courageously do our part to make it a reality." He expressed his appreciation for the cooperation employees had given him "during the last few troublesome years."

THANKS FIREMEN—Mr. and Mrs. Anthony Gibbs of 15 North Broad Street wish to express their gratitude to the Peekskill Fire Department for their assistance in putting out a fire in their home early Thursday morning.

UNUTTERABLE

By Robert Engler

The greatest picture has never been painted. The greatest song has never been sung. The greatest poem has never appeared in print. The greatest book has never been written.

The deepest emotions are yet without words. Only in the unutterable silences of the soul do the greatest of all emotions make themselves felt.

And it is entirely possible that a wordless peasant has felt a greater poem than ever was put to paper. The surging souls of lovers stir up deep wells of feeling that never reach the surface of expression.

What astonishing vistas of unsuspected beauty would appear, could many of the stoically silent give tongue to the haunting thoughts that tread in and out of their consciousness!

Perhaps it is just as well that the greatest things are unutterable. An idea is never quite so great, once it is clearly expressed. Expression often robs a thought of its vague and misty beauty.

The unutterable lures us on to the next chapter. It is the fleeting will-o'-the-wisp that hovers forever over the blank canvas of the artist. It is that which makes him patiently return to his easel in the face of failure after failure.

The unutterable tames and civilizes the most temperamental. When all the laws of God and man failed to restrain Cellini, the Unutterable made him a slave to beautiful creation.
